PARSHENDI WARRIOR

BY ELLE FIRESPRAY

We primed our miniature in black and sprayed white from above as detailed in the Priming Tutorial. We will be using generic names for the colours or alternative names from the colours of the Army Painter set in this tutorial.

To begin, we cover the body skin with Matte White.

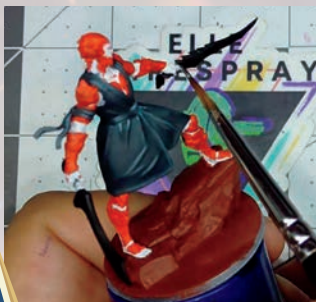

Next, we add a rich red (such as Carapace red) to all caparace areas. With a little black, we paint the eyes.

For the clothing, we cover with Matte Black. And for the base we use a reddish brown.

Adding light grey to the original black, we can paint some highlights.

For the weapons, cover in black and then add Shardblade Silver.

Paint the handle of the sword with Medium Tan.

With a bright orange (mixing red & yellow), highlight some of the most raised areas of the caparace.

If you'd like to add some texture to the base, dry brush the rock with ivory or an off-white colour.

To finish, paint the rest of the base and the rim with black.

And now our Parshendi warrior is complete!
